

Most of you have completed your homework.

In class on Friday September 24th, I asked you to answer the question, “Why do you believe you deserve an education?” You had a total of 15 minutes to answer this question, no more, no less. If you completed this assignment in class and you handed in the work on Google Classroom, you are all set, and you have no homework. For those that wrote their answer on paper, go to where the assignment is created and follow the instructions. Look where the question is posted, add your answer, and submit it. DO NOT add anything else. You already used your allotted 15 minutes. Adding extra time to work on it would be cheating. I am trusting you. Hand it in and your homework is complete.

For those of you that missed class, here is your homework assignment.

First thing to do is to go to Google Classroom and find your assignment question. You will be answering the same question, “Why do you believe you deserve an education?” Get a timer (there’s one on your phone or your parent’s phone) set it for 15 minutes, begin writing. I am looking for depth. What I mean by that is, I want to see that you can write about a topic, and you can make your reader feel something. And you don’t need to write for hours and hours to get your audience to try to understand how you felt or what you mean. Make sure you are also staying on top of your grammar and spelling. Do not waste time writing this on paper and then in Google Classroom. You will be writing your answer directly in Google Classroom. Submit your work no later than Thursday morning 8:00am 9/30/21.
